Onderwijsactiviteiten

- European Competition Law and Policy

Inhoud

Creating and maintaining an internal market characterised by a regime of free competition is one of the basic components of European integration. This course deals with the policies and legal rules that guarantee such free competition. The aim of this course is to give an insight into all aspects of competition law and policy: the policy on anti-competitive agreements between undertakings (so-called 'cartels'), on abuses by dominant undertakings (such as the well-known 'Microsoft' case), on mergers and acquisitions (for example the much publicised ENI-EDP-GDP decision), and the issue of market definition in the framework of these policies. The role of the member states' governments in guaranteeing free competition within the EU cannot be underestimated. Therefore, attention will also be paid to the policy on public undertakings and on state aid to private undertakings (subsidies, grants and loans...). Another topic is the way that competition law and policy is being created and enforced, both by the European institutions (especially the European Commission) and by national authorities (national competition agencies and judges). Finally, there will be thorough reflection on how undertakings have to deal with these rules and ensure compliance with them.

Vereiste voorkennis

Competenties

Students should already have a background in economics. Knowledge of or at least a keen interest in European history and economics is required; knowledge of business law is most certainly an asset.

Leermiddelen

Verplichte leermiddelen

The necessary materials will be communicated throughout the course.

Aanbevolen leermiddelen

Recommended materials will be communicated throughout the course

Werkvormen

Omschrijving

The course will be offered mainly in the form of discussions seminars. In the first introductory seminars, a general overview of the fundamentals of EU competition policy and its basic rules will be discussed. At a later stage, the seminars will focus on more specific topics such as the policy towards certain types of cartel agreements or state aid in certain sectors. The participants will be asked to prepare these seminars by reading materials or preparing cases, the latter occasionally in the form of a short paper. Active participation in the discussions by all is essential.

Evaluatie
